

homepage & flow — color and form applied

Same structure, sequence and content as wireframes 1a–5c. English copy, aligned with the live store (alterpop.store). Hero is a single fixed franchise (no carousel dots on 1a). Returns fixed at 14 days everywhere. PDP "premium" variant reworked around real store mechanics — spec sheet, licensing seal, fragile-item handling, dispatch line — replacing the old certificate/serial-number concept, which doesn't exist in a dropshipping catalog. Content mixes anime with film/series to prove hero and editorial slots are universe-agnostic. Catalogue Experience layer added: Character/Line·Manufacturer/Height/Price on every card, a Shop by Character strip in the Universe Room, and two new pages — Character Page (9a) and Line Page (9b) — reusing the same card and grid components, no new visual system.

3b

PDP "premium piece" (mobile, 390px)

reworked around what the real catalog actually has: a structured spec sheet, an official-licensing seal naming real suppliers, fragile-handling notice, and a dispatch line — replacing the old certificate/serial-number mechanism, which has no dropshipping equivalent. The 3a/3b split is now impulse vs. premium (price, fragility, spec density), not "with vs. without a certificate". Motion: still-life enters with `--motion-editorial (400ms)`, fade + scale 1.02→1.00; thumbnail/dot swap also uses `--motion-editorial` (a collection still-life earns a slower read); specs table reveals row-by-row on viewport entry with a 40ms stagger, editorial easing — the system's only stagger, reserved for this moment; Add to Cart stays `--motion-transactional (120ms)`.

impulse vs. premium, not certificate vs. no certificate:
dense specs, fragile-handling, and a named licensing seal replace the old serial-number/certificate concept from 3a, which doesn't exist in a dropshipping catalog.

3c

PDP desktop (1280px) — impulse vs. premium

Same motion rules as 3a/3b, applied at desktop scale: impulse (top) loads flat, -
-motion-transactional on any thumbnail swap and on Add to Cart; premium (bottom) enters with --motion-editorial (fade + scale 1.02→1.00), its thumbnail swap also --motion-editorial, its spec strip staggers in row-by-row at +40ms editorial easing, and its Add to Cart stays --motion-transactional.

opened from the search icon on 1a's header. Verb-first, no exclamation points, with a concrete way out.

5d

state — desktop search overlay opened from the search icon on 1b's header. Overlay replaces the nav row full-width instead of squeezing an inline input — same progressive-disclosure pattern as the mega-menu and mobile filter drawer.

5e

state — cookie consent banner (mobile, 390px)

Shows on first visit only. Bottom-anchored, non-blocking — sits above content, doesn't cover it like the search/filter overlays. Accept and Reject are visually equal weight: same size, same outline treatment, no Gold — Gold stays reserved for purchase CTAs (4c's "Continue as Guest / Log In" pairing is the reference for equal-weight buttons).

A mobile mockup of a cookie consent banner. The banner is a light beige rectangle with a thin grey border. The top half is empty. The bottom half contains text and two buttons. The text reads: "We use cookies to run the store and, with your consent, to measure and improve it. See our Cookie Policy for details." Below the text are two buttons. The top button is dark navy blue with the word "Accept" in white. The bottom button is light beige with a thin grey border and the word "Reject" in dark navy blue.

We use cookies to run the store and, with your consent, to measure and improve it. See our Cookie Policy for details.

Accept

Reject

5f

state — cookie consent banner (desktop, 1280px)

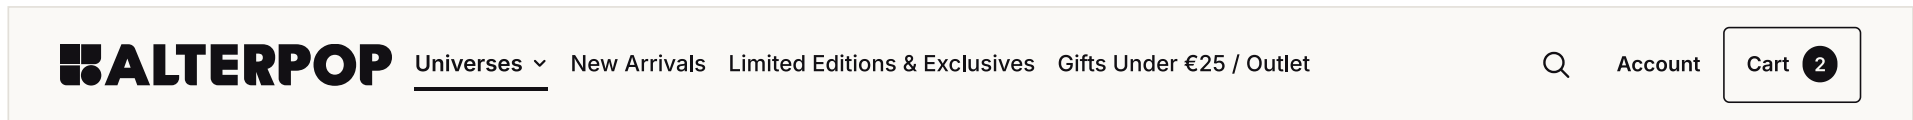

Same non-blocking bottom bar, full-width. Copy sits left, both buttons sit right at equal size — no visual hierarchy between Accept and Reject.

6a

nav restructure — universes-first, desktop (closed)

Franchise moves from a menu item to the primary structure. "Universes" is now first, right after the logo. Same 72px height, same type/color tokens as V1 — only the order and the first item change. No motion in this state (nothing is open).

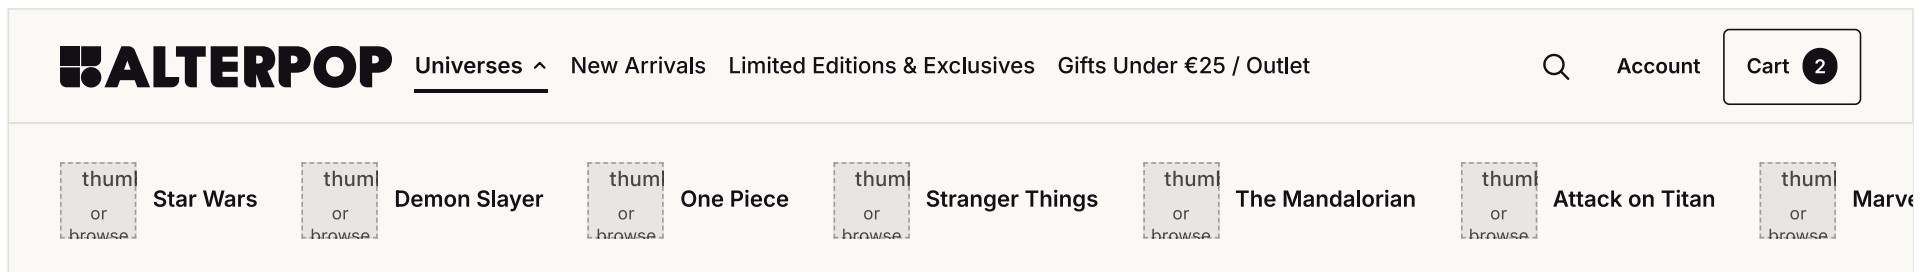

Resolved: "Shop by Category" is removed from the nav. The 4-item structure above is final across desktop and mobile.

6b

nav restructure — universes panel, desktop (open)

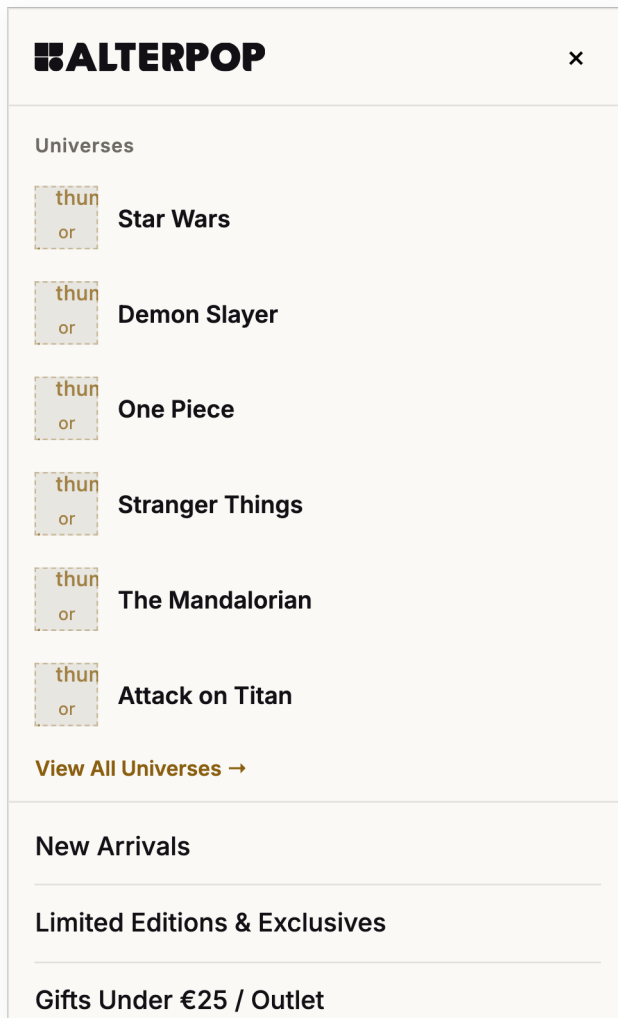

Trigger, not mega-menu: a single thin horizontal strip (96px) under the nav, 6–8 franchises by name + small square thumbnail, no columns/categories.
Opens/closes on --motion-editorial (400ms, cubic-bezier(0.22,1,0.36,1)) — this is a discovery moment, not a transaction.

6c

nav restructure — mobile drawer with Universes section

Universes is the first section in the hamburger drawer — a plain vertical list (not accordion), fully visible on open, scroll if needed. Drawer opens on `--motion-transactional (120ms, cubic-bezier(0.4,0,0.2,1))`, same as other nav-level open/close actions — the list itself has no separate reveal animation.

Resolved: "Shop by Category" is removed from the nav — same 4-item structure as desktop.

7a

Universe Room — franchise-first collection page (desktop, 1280px)

Franchise is the space, not a filter inside a generic catalog — the only collection-page pattern in the system now. Header enters with --motion-editorial (400ms) — fade + scale 1.02→1.00 — when arriving from the Universes panel (6b) or a homepage universe card. Everything below the header (filters, sort, pagination) uses --motion-transactional (120ms).
